PC USA's database contains a staggering number of facts about every state in the U.S. The information ranges from age distribution, population, ethnic groups, and education statistics to annual pay by industry, taxes, gross state products, and (my personal favorite) state songs. There are dozens more information categories accessible. Search and enjoy; the information appears to be as current as possible.

The rather lackluster relief maps of the various states disappointed me a bit. Whether the Rockies or the Appalachians, all mountains resemble anthills, and with the exception of rivers, no real terrain differentiation shows. Also, even though PC USA utilizes music, no sound boards are supported. Finally, technical support calls aren't toll-free.

The abovementioned minor problems hardly mar the most comprehensive and useful geographical database I have seen. PC USA's applications seem as numerous and varied as the people who will use them, and I can't recommend this program more highly. Now, if I could just find something to replace those clunky volumes of encyclopedias.

PC USA puts all manner of intriguing statistical and geographical data at your fingertips.

Lick envelope-addressing problems with Nvelope Plus.

NVELOPE PLUS

Designed to make envelope printing a snap, Nvelope Plus offers several features which account for the Plus in the title: the ability to print addresses easily in different fonts, to choose one of many envelope and label types offered or customize your own, to add ZIP codes from a comprehensive ZIP code database, and to create a thorough personal database of addresses.

As a memory-resident program with readily modified hot keys, Nvelope Plus pops up easily in an existing address database, in a word processing program, or anywhere else you might have addresses tucked away. Once summoned, Nvelope Plus makes grabbing an address for printing onto an envelope or address label marvelously simple. You can easily specify the size and type of envelopes and address labels, as well as whether they have a preprinted return address.

Nvelope Plus has a clear, effective user's manual, though once the program has been loaded, it needs little explanation. The envelope screens clearly display how the end product will look. If you place an envelope properly in your printer, you get what you expect.

Nvelope Plus performs its primary task quite well, with enough extras to elevate it above the status of a typewriter substitute. Finding a ZIP code for any city in America with the built-in ZIP code directory, for instance, can save quite a bit of time. Without Nvelope Plus, the simple task of printing an envelope isn't as simple as it seems. With it, there's one less hassle to slow you down.

The petite 4½"x4¼"x2" box is capable of emitting a truly ear-piercing alarm, concentrated inside the car, where it can most effectively repel an intruder. Activated by the light that accompanies the opening of car door, hood or trunk, it also senses impact or "unnecessary roughness"; the shriek lasts for one minute and only the key stops it — unplugging the lighter activates a back-up battery. SANTÉ

Can't afford the services of a registered dietitian to put you and your menus in a healthful frame of mind? Santé puts one in your kitchen. The government's nutritional guidelines come built in and make eating for optimum health less troublesome.

Developed by Hopkins Technology with the assistance of a registered dietitian, Santé describes the nutritional content of over 2000 foods and analyzes how your meals measure up against the U.S. Recommended Dietary Allowances (USRDA) for your age and gender. The program offers analyses of food, which check specifically for 29 nutrients, compare saturated and unsaturated fats, and calculate the percentage of protein, carbohydrates, and fats in your diet.

Analyze a single food, recipe, meal, day, or range of days; the results are displayed or printed in easy-to-read reports and bar charts. Some discoveries prove unpleasant: Your Sunday eggs, bacon, and biscuits give you double the maximum USRDA for cholesterol.

You say you want healthful alternatives to your old standbys? Try the 12 included recipes and the hundreds you receive once you've registered as a Santé owner. All recipes are dietitian tested, and you can import them—and your own recipes—with the touch of a key.

Plan a week's worth of meals and make adjustments to reduce the fat or increase the calcium. See how you've done over a month's time—some days you may not do well, but over the long haul, Santé keeps you on track, nutritionally speaking.

The program's friendly interface features pull-down menus you navigate with the arrow and Enter keys. Online help nearly makes the manual dispensable, explaining program functions and providing information about each nutrient.

If you consume something not in the database, you can personalize the food list. You can also enter ingredient prices; Santé calculates the cost of meals.

Hopkins promises to provide personal replies to all questions about the program and nutrition. Believe the promise. I found a bug, and tech support went to work, fixed it, and had a new version in the mail in no time. Santé is inspirational. I'm more conscientious about my diet, and I know I'm eat-

PROFESSOR WINDOWS

A graphically oriented environment's bound to throw longtime DOS users a curve or two, but learning the basics of Windows shouldn't cause any anguish. If you've been holding off installing Windows because you dread the climb up the learning curve, look to Professor Windows for a lift. It's a friendly program that walks you through the sometimes confusing world of Windows.

Using either the mouse or the keyboard, you can learn about such matters as simple graphics objects, Windows accessories, getting help, and printing. Subjects are arranged in six areas (startup, basics, tasks, printing, accessories, and advanced), and you can move ahead or back one screen, or jump completely out of a tutorial at any time.

Though elementary, treatment of the material proves effective within its defined boundaries. Users answer simple multiple-choice questions on newly learned facts. A bar display of continuing progress through each lesson sustains the sense of accomplishment.

Ironically, in spite of Windows' multitasking environment, Professor Windows won't load when anything else remains open, excluding Program Manager. It will freeze if you run it under a Windows shell (like DC Windows Express or PubTech File Manager).

Professor Windows won't help everyone; it's strictly for novice users and probably not advanced enough for longtime PC users. Professor Windows does assuage computer anxieties if you have them, and if you need a little assistance to jumpstart your Windows career, Professor Windows could be just the patient tutor that you've been waiting for.

MIND EXPANSION

Timothy Leary is the former Harvard psychology professor whose philosophy, "Tune in, turn on, drop out," changed the face of America in the 1960s. Since then, his interests have turned to computers and virtual reality. Periodically, Dr. Leary appears on America Online for informal interaction with subscribers. Here is the transcript of one of his recent appearances.

Timothy Leary: Let me say a few words about what's going on in my life these days. We're working on a newsletter which has a tentative publication date of July 4th. The name is tentatively "Timothy Leary's Animations." The newsletter will be very interactive. We'll be soliciting articles from our readers for future editions.

Question: Dr. Leary, what prompted you to get into software? Also, any electronics-related stories you can relate to us from the 1960s?

Leary: What prompted me to get involved with software is the interaction between computers and the human mind. The language of computers gave me the metaphor I was searching for 20 years ago. As [for] the 1960s, that's a "whole nother lifetime." We're now in the 1990s. Why look back?

Q: Tell us about your software for mind expansion.

Leary: The reasoning behind the mind expansion software is the empowerment of the individual where everything that appears on the screen is what you have put there.

Q: What have you been doing in recent years, Dr. Leary?

Leary: I'm the head of two very influential software development companies. One is called FUTIQUE, and the other is TELELECTRONICS. We are developing 3-D electronic environments for the Mac, IBM, and the new 16-bit videogame appliances. Our company's aim is to load onto compact disc prefabricated fully furnished homes, gardens, landscapes, and any environment that the user would like to "boot up."

Q: What do you think about the Libertarian party?

Leary: I am an enthusiastic member of the Libertarian Party. I think that in politics the politicians of both parties, Democratic [and] Republican, pander to the lowest common denominator. Therefore, Newton's Law of Politics is true: "In politics the scum rises to the top." For this reason, I back the Libertarian Party. Our aim is to diminish, decrease, decimate the power of the state to interfere in the individual's life.

Q: Have you been doing any experiments with virtual reality?

Leary: Yes, I am involved with several groups developing TELEPRESENCE environments and electronic environments. I probably give more lectures and demonstrations about VR than anyone in the field.

Q: When will Mind Mirror be available for Macintosh?

Leary: We are trying to get an update and revision of Mind Mirror for the Mac. With graphics, graphics, and more graphics! It is one of the two great sorrows of my life that Mind Mirror, my wonderful head program, was never translated for my Mac-using friends.

Q: Do you have software [currently available] for the Macintosh?

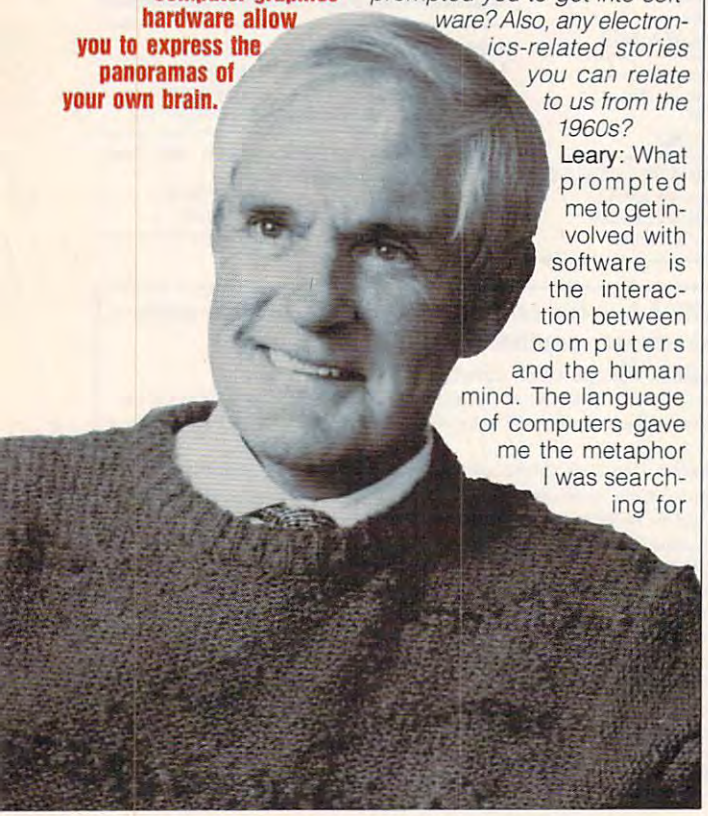
Leary: I do not have functioning Mac software. I can, however, strongly recommend four Mac products which convert the screen into a comfortable, livable, 3-D environment. These programs are 1) Virtual Valerie, 2) Spaceship Warlock, 3) Manhole, and 4) Cosmic Osmo.

Q: What about the software you're currently working on?

Leary: We are working, as I mentioned before, on developing 3-D programs which will allow performers to select and move around in an electronic environment. Our programs are interactor theaters where a small group can assemble for purposes of education, entertainment, and enlightenment. The three E's of the electronic twenty-first century.

Q: Dr. Leary, could you comment on the advent of virtual reality? Someone pointed out that it couldn't compare to LSD. Do you see this new technology as a substitute for drugs?

Leary: No. Virtual reality isn't a substitute for organic psychedelic plants and drugs. Psychedelic drugs allow you to exit the repetitious word processes of your mind to boot up limitless programs, directories, and files in your brain. All of which, by the way, are technicolor, multimedia, and moving at the speed of light. On the other hand, electronic devices like the new computer-graphics hardware allow you to select electronic patterns and multimedia environments to express the panoramas of your own brain. ❐



Electronic devices like the new computer-graphics hardware allow you to express the panoramas of your own brain.
